"The Kodak/WBCA All-America Program is one of our most prized possessions," said Beth Bass, WBCA Chief Executive Officer. "It symbolizes the best and oldest running sports sponsorships in the history of women's basketball. There are plenty of other All-America programs, but this is by far the most coveted."

"Kodak is proud to partner with the WBCA in honoring the best women's collegiate players as Kodak All-Americans," said Bud Denker, Director & VP Brand & Market Development at Kodak. "We acknowledge the accomplishments of these student-athletes and the positive recognition they bring to their schools, their communities and the game."

The NCAA Division I Kodak/WBCA All-America Women's Basketball Team was announced at the Kodak Press Conference prior to WBCA's "Night of All-Stars" on April 4th at 4:00 p.m. at Georgia Tech's Alexander Memorial Coliseum in Atlanta, GA. Women's basketball pioneer, Ann Meyers Drysdale served as emcee.
